5 This invention is related to other inventions made by at least one of the inventors herein for Individually-Contoured Seat Cushion and Shape Capturing and Fabricating Method for Seat Cushion described in U.S. patent application Serial
No. [249.301], and for Contoured Seat Cushion and Method for Offloading Pressure from Skeletal Bone Prominences and Encouraging Proper Postural 10 Alignment described in U.S. patent application Serial No. [249.303], and for Apparatus and Method for Evaluating Clearance from a Contoured Seat Cushion described in U.S. patent application Serial No. [249.304], all of which are filed concurrently herewith and all of which are assigned to the assignee of the present invention. The subject matter of these concurrently-filed applications is 15 incorporated herein by reference.

Field of the Invention

This invention relates to seat cushions, and more particularly, to a new and improved modular seat cushion formed by a human support portion and an interlocking base portion. The human support portion provides individualized 20 support for the user, and the base portion fits with, is accepted by, or becomes part of a seat support structure. By forming the seat cushion in this modular form, improved support, utility and comfort is available to the user for a relatively modest cost. The present invention is particularly useful to create seat cushions for wheelchairs, although the broader aspects of the invention are not limited 25 specifically to such use.

Background of the Invention

A wheelchair seat cushion must perform a number of important functions.
The seat cushion should be comfortable and capable of providing proper support for optimal posture and posture control for a considerable length of time. The seat
